CONCEPT NOTE

As Human Rights advocate the welfare and well-being of all persons with equal treatment everywhere at all times, they have never shown any kind of discrimination towards any individual or group of people. However, the socio-economic, political and cultural diversities, prevailing in each state across the world, and politics of the nation states, deprive the free exercise of human rights to a certain number of people. Such deprived people are normally referred to as vulnerable, marginal and disadvantaged communities or groups. In the realm of international law of human rights, these groups are broadly classified as women, refugees, disabled, internally displaced persons, HIV/AIDS victims, Migrant workers, minorities, mentally ill persons, trafficked persons, and sexual minorities' et.al. To wipe out the miseries of these people, and to help them to achieve the equal status with that of the developed sections of a society, the United Nations and the Nation-states adopted number of declarations, plans and policies. However, due to poverty and other cross-cultural social problems many a times, a majority of vulnerable people are not able to access their basic needs, in spite of the efforts both at the international and national spheres. This Seminar is an endeavor to throw light on the global and national initiatives taken to make accessible the guaranteed human rights to the marginalized sections and to analyze their efficacy, expediency with an ultimate aim to suggest measures to strengthen the human rights regime to address the contemporary concerns and challenges in this regard.
